

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

Steelcom Electronics have been using and selling the ACT charging products since they were released in New Zealand. We service many clients including emergency services with portable communications equipment and the importance of a system which is both easy to use and provides clear indication of the state of readiness cannot be understated.

We have found the ACT range of products to be superior to any other charging system we have tested, and have been able to resurrect batteries unable to be charged with other systems to the extent they have been able to go into full service thus saving our clients battery replacement costs.

A constant problem with portable radio equipment is having the gear fully charged and ready at all times. Prior to the release of the ACT range, we have not found any charging system which could keep batteries "at the ready" 24 X 7.

I have no hesitation in recommending the ACT products and would be happy to be contacted for a personal endorsement.
